

Jeremy Williams

Senior Vice President and Deputy General Counsel

Warner Bros. Entertainment, Inc.

Jeremy Williams is Senior Vice President and Deputy General Counsel of Warner Bros. As head of the company's Intellectual Property Department, he works regularly on copyright, trademark and related intellectual property matters, including those involving legislation, litigation and production clearances. He has taught copyright and entertainment law at Franklin Pierce Law Center and at the University of Southern California Law School.